TWO-DAY NATIONAL SEMINAR

INDIA'S POST-1991 INWARD FDI EXPERIENCE: LOOKING BEYOND THE AGGREGATES

March 11-12, 2016

ISID in collaboration with ICSSR organised a Seminar on 'India's Post-1991 Inward FDI Experience: Looking Beyond the Aggregates' during March 11-12, 2016. The objective of the Seminar was to disseminate the findings of the ICSSR-sponsored study titled 'India's Inward FDI Experience in the Post-liberalisation Period with Emphasis on the Manufacturing Sector' and to get feedback from the participants.

Session 1 analysed multiple dimensions of the increase in India's reported FDI inflows since 1991. The most significant of these came in 2000-01 when changes were introduced in the reporting practice and reinvested earnings, equity capital of unincorporated bodies and other capital to the inflows—officially referred to as 'FDI equity inflows'—began to be counted as FDI. The new items, especially reinvested earnings, which were not actually cross-border flows, turned out to be significant relative to equity inflows. However, the reported inflows are not based on the internationally prescribed criterion of 10 per cent or more voting power. The international definition does not take into account the qualities associated with FDI. Though it accommodates several classes of investors, not all of them possess the critical qualities associated with FDI. Thus, merely labelling an FDI investment on the 10 per cent criterion will not serve the purpose. In this backdrop, relevant aspects like real vs. other FDI inflows, real sources of FDI, low share of manufacturing sector, dominance of a few industries over manufacturing sector FDI, acquisitions by foreign companies, location of FDI projects, and venture capital investments were discussed to gain a greater understanding.

Session 2 focused on global FDI flows and India's relative position. Inclusion of retained earnings has been distorting the reported global FDI flows. In fact, considerable reverse resource transfers seem to be taking place to developed countries, especially after the financial crisis. It thus becomes necessary that the developing country policy makers be careful in interpreting the reported FDI flows because of the possibility of round-tripping of investments by domestic investors. Probably the most misleading figures on FDI on which strong inferences are drawn is the case of China because of the substantial involvement of both private and state-owned Chinese companies. Though not much real FDI went into China, it would be wrong to overemphasize the contribution of that real FDI to the country's growth. Even that contribution did not seem to have come automatically—China had to 'cajole, co-opt and coerce' the foreign investors. There is a need to understand China's experience in greater detail, than merely going by the aggregate numbers. Various factors such as movements of global FDI inflows, cross-border greenfield investments and values of M&As were taken into consideration to determine the outcome towards this end.

REMEMBERING FORMER MEMBER OF THE BOARD OF GOVERNORS

The members of the Board of Governors, faculty and staff expressed condolences on the passing away of Professor T.S. Papola, founder member of the Institute on November 23, 2015.

The Institute wished to place on record its sincere appreciation of the contributions of Professor T.S. Papola in the development of the Institute. Professor Papola had been a source of strength and inspiration to the ISID community since the formation of the Institute in October 1986. In his passing away, the nation has lost an outstanding Labour Economist and academician.

Session 3 focused on the formulation of FDI policy, drawing on a few case studies. Domestic stakeholders like the Confederation of All India Traders (CAIT) expressed fear of a negative impact of global retail chains. To put these fears to rest, policy makers introduced certain restrictions and obligations on the potential foreign companies, thus justifying the entry of foreign retail majors. Some of these obligations/restrictions include investment in backend infrastructure to help the farm sector, local sourcing to help small enterprises and zoning restrictions to protect small traders. But, what was more worrying was the reliance of the policymakers on a few large foreign companies like Walmart to solve the problems facing Indian agriculture. Given the nature of foreign investments flowing into India, it seems unlikely that companies such as Walmart would invest huge amounts in backend infrastructure to bring about a turnaround in a country's agriculture. Moreover, what seems to have started as yet another means to promote India's exports, following China's example, lost much of the direction as other objectives got enmeshed. The safeguards do not refer to exports at all. The case of opening up India's retail trade exposed the limitations of the country's policies towards FDI.

Session 4 focused on the key aspects of FDI company operations. These are: (i) Exports and Trade Balance: an analysis of company level data and of the tabulations of RBI brought out some important and disturbing dimensions of the operations of FDI companies in India, in particular those of foreign subsidiaries; (ii) Technology, Royalties, Dividends and Profitability: increasing preference for payments in the form of royalties and a variety of other heads, extremely low emphasis on R&D, low profitability or even losses coupled with lesser preference for dividend payments, point to the continued dependence of FDI companies on foreign parents and loss of revenue for the exchequer; (iii) Automobile Sector: RBI company finance studies as well as corporate databases suggest the importance of automobile sector from the standpoint of royalty payments; and, (iv) Healthcare Sector: data shows that R&D is another major sector for foreign investment, both in manufacturing and in healthcare services.

Summing up, the classification of inflows based on theoretical expectations, identification of inflows based on investing companies' corporate headquarters, the functional aspects of FDI companies—based on data relating to large number of unlisted companies, the substantial servicing burden, heavy leakages of revenue, the unpacking of global FDI flows, especially with regard to China—were underlined for their policy relevance and future empirical research. The observed distribution of FDI into different types is closer to reality and what is expected due to changes in the global financial flows which unfortunately has not attracted the attention of policy makers and many analysts. All these different flows do not necessarily have the same effect on any process of development in any country.

WORKSHOPS/TRAINING PROGRAMMES

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE EVOLVING REGIME IN INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY PROTECTION ISID, CESP (JNU), PHFI, ISIL and TWN November 02–04, 2015

In November 2015, a three-day International Conference on Evolving Regime in Intellectual Property Protection was jointly organised by ISID, PHFI, ISIL and TWN under the umbrella of the Health Economics Association of India (HEAI). A report on the national IPR policy assessment was presented. The main organiser of this conference was the CESP, JNU. The objective of the conference was (i) to discuss the experience of India and other developing countries in implementing the Agreement on Trade Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS) during the past two decades, (ii) to discuss the implications of the emerging regime of intellectual property protection, especially on access to medicines and agriculture, and (iii) to examine the options available to developing countries for addressing the development challenges posed by the evolving international regime of intellectual property protection. It was held from November 02 to 04, 2015 at JNU Convention Centre, Jawaharlal Nehru University in New Delhi.

WORKSHOP AUDIO-VISUAL MEDIA AS A TOOL IN RESEARCH for Social Science Researchers November 16–21, 2015

After conducting two successful and well appreciated workshops on Audio-Visual Media as a Tool in Research for Young Social Science Researchers in 2013 and 2014, the Media Centre at ISID conducted its third six-day workshop during November 16–21, 2015.

This workshop was designed to familiarise the participants with AVM tools and motivate researchers and academics to use this medium as a tool, to not only enhance the content, but also reach a wider audience and have greater impact of their research. Based on previous feedbacks, the practical hands-on training in production of audio-video material was emphasised. The programme broadly covered the following: (i) Basic understanding of the AVM; (ii) Role and importance of AVM as a tool in research; (iii) Effective presentation and dissemination using AVM; (iv) AVM production techniques and understanding the technology, basic camera equipment, editing software, streaming video; and, (v) Hands-on production of AV output.

Twenty-two participants from all over India comprising scholars from various disciplines in the social sciences were selected to attend the programme. Once again the response and feedback to the programme was very encouraging and positive. Subject experts and professionals from the field were invited as resource persons for various sessions and most of the practical sessions were handled by the ISID media division team.

YOUTH WORKSHOP 'INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY, PUBLIC HEALTH AND ACCESS TO MEDICINES' AND 'GLOBAL CONGRESS ON INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY AND PUBLIC INTEREST' ISID, PHM and Prayas December 14–22, 2015

A major capacity building programme undertaken at ISID with the help of Peoples Health Movement (PHM) and Prayas concerned the theme of Intellectual Property, Public Health and Access to Medicines. The workshop was conducted at ISID from December 14–22, 2015. The programme was made to coincide with the Global Congress on Intellectual Property which took place this time in India. Some of the broad themes of the workshop included: introduction to intellectual property rights and access to medicines; WTO and TRIPS: evolution, consequences, legal aspects and reform proposals; Indian patent law and policy: history, 2005 amendments and recent developments; patent examination and enforcement; trade agreements, TRIPS-plus demands and public health; challenging pharmaceutical patent monopolies: role of public health and public interest groups; and, research and development: alternative models. Besides the participation of academics, policymakers and industry there were resource persons invited from US, Malaysia and Germany to contribute to the education and training on intellectual property rights and public health. The workshop has been coordinated by Prof. Dinesh Abrol.

ORIENTATION PROGRAMME SOCIAL SCIENCE RESEARCH METHODOLOGY for Research Scholars and Teachers belonging to Scheduled Castes, Scheduled Tribes and Other Marginalised Groups February 22–27, 2016

The Institute organised a one-week Orientation Programme on Social Science Research Methodology during February 22–27, 2016. The programme was sponsored by the Indian Council of Social Science Research (ICSSR), New Delhi.

It was designed to build research capacities, both of the research scholars belonging to SC/ST and marginalised groups in India and the ISID faculty. The programme was multidisciplinary in nature that sought to: i) refresh theoretical knowledge and identify issues relating to their specific research areas and contemporary issues relating to development and disparities, ii) develop skills and the ability to undertake research on those issues with appropriate data and methodologies (quantitative and qualitative), and iii) improve research capacity on how to write and publish research papers in peer-reviewed social science journals. The week-long programme consisted of lectures, policy debates, group discussions, exposure to databases, research methods and hands-on exercises. Special lectures by reputed academicians on issues relating to education, health, industry and employment, poverty, gender issues, etc., with specific focus on development and disparities were also organised.

The training programme was as much a learning experience as it was rewarding. It provided a platform to share knowledge as well as sharpen analytical skills necessary to effectively carry out research. The programme covered all contemporary issues in social science research and relevant research methodologies (quantitative and qualitative). A review of the participants' evaluation (through a questionnaire) of the programme revealed the usefulness of the knowledge that was gained in the discussions, group work sessions and exercises. The participants welcomed and appreciated the initiative to build capacity in social science research. Dr Swadhin Mondal was the Programme Coordinator.

NATIONAL TECHNICAL FORUM NEED FOR FREE MEDICINES AND DIAGNOSTICS FOR ALL

March 02-03, 2016

ISID collaborated with Prayas and Jan Swasthya Abhiyan (JSA) to hold a National Technical Forum on the impact assessment of access to medicine, IP, procurement policies on the viability of free medicine programmes led by the state governments at the moment in about five states. This National Technical Forum on the Need for Free Medicines and Diagnostics for All attracted several academicians and civil society members to the two-day conference organised in collaboration with JSA and Prayas at ISID and held on March 02 and 03, 2016. It was successful in attracting the participation of the state authorities of all five states. A German Research Group which has worked on similar issues in their own country also participated in this meeting. The forum has been coordinated by Prof. Dinesh Abrol.

DIWALI CELEBRATIONS

This year the Diwali function was held on 11th November 2015 at the ISID campus. Senior faculty members officially inaugurated the function by lighting a lamp. A spirited celebration featured various activities including games like tambola and musical chairs, and song and dance performances for both children and adults. The staff members along with their families participated in the event with zeal and enthusiasm. Towards the end, the stage was thrown open for dandiya, followed by dinner. The event was well-attended and was a huge success.
